Numerous highway robberies in Swansboro during the past month have recalled to the older citizens of that place the memories of another reign of terror which swept over that community thirty-five years ago. At that time the depredations of thieves became so bad that Judge William J. Clopton, of the Chesterfield Circuit Court, found it necessary to swear in thirty special policemen. B. H. Morrissette, who was made chief of the vigilance committee, still has in his possession a copy of the original order.

Girls Unable to Support Themselves on Department Store Wages.

SUGGESTIONS FOR REFORMS

Witness Names $8 a Week as Minimum for Decent Living.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Chicago, March 8 .- Edward Hillman, general manager of the department store that bears his name, declared before the Illinois Senate commission on white slavery to-day that low wages is one of the chief contributory causes to the fall of women, and he named $5 weekly as the minimum upon which a girl might support herself without undue strain.

Edwin F. Mandel, president of Mandel Brothers, who was examined on Friday, went on record in a letter to the commission that his firm had fixed $\frac{1}{2}$ to a minimum wage for beginners, instead of $$, and that in future it would make a careful examination of the affiliations of each girl who applied for a position, so as to be sure that she lives at home.

that she lives at home.

James Simpson, vice-president of Marshall Field & Co., sent an invitation to the commission to inspect the books of the corporation, so as to see the profit of the firm last year or any other year. He maintained in his letter, as he did upon the stand on Friday afternoon, that the figures were not a public matter. The commission not a public matter. The commission will take up this question Monday morning.

One white slave was examined by the commission to-day. She told how she had been brought here by a man who expected her to give him $20 a day, and when she failed to do so, he beat her until at last she left him, and he was sent to the Bridwell. In executive session the commission

Edwin Hillman met the commission half way on every proposition. He declared the suggestion that an investigator should be employed to hunt up the girls who applied for positions and see that they were properly cared for at home and able to live upon their salaries a "capital idea," and one that he would be delighted to adopt. At the outset he was asked the vital question: "What do you consider, if any, is the conpection between low wages paid to women workers and morality among women?" to which he replied: "Well, in some cases it might have a connection, and in some cases It might not."

In course of his testimony, Mr. Hillman asserted a girl could support her-self in Chicago on between $8 and $9 a week. He said he could live on $10 and live well on $12.

"Do you believe some women would be wrong before they would starve?" Mr. Hillman was asked.
"I do," he answered firmly.

williamsburg, Va., March S.—The friends here of Milan Smith were shocked to learn that he had died last night while alone in his little cottage Just east of town, Mr. Smith was a familiar figure on the streets here, and was in town yesterday, apparently in his usual robust health. Before leaving the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Parsely, with whom he boarded, he complained of not feeling well. He had been dead some hours when found this morning, probably from heart failure.

Mr. Smith was born in Ohlo, but came here from Michigan about fifteen years ago. He purchased "Poplar Grove" farm in the lower part of James City and lived there until he sold the farm some years ago. Although a Northern man, he was a deep Southern sympathizer during the Civil War, His story of how he evaded fighting against the South was a most interesting one. He tried to remain neutral and did so, but his neighbors in the North kept him on the never found. He was a man of considerable means. He is survived by a number of children, all of whom live in the North except Dayton Smith, who has been in this section several years.
